Oral examinations via electronic media

Oral examinations via electronic media have so far been regarded as exceptions, that can only be approved in cases of hardship and require a justified request for hardship application. Due to current developments regarding the corona virus, the dean and the head of the examination board of the Faculty of Management and Economics hereby determine that the case of hardship can be assumed. Oral electronic examinations are therefore to be considered hardship cases and are approved until further notice. This applies to the following tests:

- Oral examinations for bachelor and master theses.
- ONE oral module examination, provided that this examination completes the course of study.
- Oral examinations as a substitute for another form of examination (that is not possible at present), if offered by the examiner.

Examination candidates do not have to submit any explicit corresponding hardship applications until further notice. If a candidate agrees to take part in an oral examination via electronic media, this agreement is automatically deemed to be a hardship case request which has been submitted and approved. By taking part in the examination, the candidate also agrees that electronic examination will be treated in the same way as a regular examination. In particular, the candidate agrees that the electronic examination will be credited and counted towards the number of attempts as a regular examination and that the weighting will correspond to that of a regular examination.
